WOOD FOR STAIRS

As one of the first features to greet all who enter a home, the staircase plays a vital and central role in shaping how our spaces define us. For those who dream of stairs that make a more personal and reflective statement, a total transformation can be as simple as the installation of spectacular wood stair cladding in collaboration with a trusted hardwood specialist.

A well-envisioned stair cladding renovation can entirely shift the look and feel of an interior, or merge seamlessly within a period property—creating the sense that the reimagined staircase has always belonged. With countless hardwood finishes and approaches to cladding available, the only obstacle to manifesting the beautiful staircase you imagine is developing that concept with a little expert guidance. In this endeavour, Unique Bespoke Wood is ever-ready to assist.

ASH WOOD FLOORING

Ash wood flooring is a fabulous choice for the home with a great selection of colours and styles available.

Ash flooring is hard as Oak flooring. Ash wood tends to resemble the highest grades of Oak because it has very few knots and many people actually mistake ash wood for Oak wood when it is used on floors. Wood from the ash tree is however easier to work with than wood from the oak tree and it takes wood stain and other finishes very well so ash wood flooring is a great choice for the home or commercial interiors. Ash wood comes in various colours which range from pure white to chocolate brown and relate to where the wood has been grown. Ash is grown in many places. White Ash grows along the Canadian border and Northern States and is similar in colour to European Ash wood. Ash can also show colours within it such as pink, purple and reddish brown.

ANTIQUÉ OAK

In antique reclaimed oak wood flooring, you may well discover not only stunning contrasts of grain colour created by years of use and exposure, but also characterful markings from old cut marks, and perhaps where hand forged iron nails once held the wood in place! The story-telling nature of such a surface not only sits beautifully within a traditional home, but fantastically off-sets the clean lines of a modern space, be it an office, a commercial environment, or a thoughtfully composed living area. Each piece of wood is utterly unique, combining to create a fascinating and enjoyable composition in any form.

WOOD FLOORING GRADES

An important decision in the hardwood buying process is the type and grade of hardwood to use. As there are many different options available, making the right choice relies on a variety of factors. When trying to decide on the type and grade of hardwood to use for a home or business, it is important to consider the construction type, the species, the installation type, whether the wood is prefinished or unfinished, and basic style and color options to suit décor needs.
